CCS Launches Terracotta Environmentalism!

We approach the environment through the Terracotta vision which focuses on realigning incentives rather than reforming human nature. Our work will aim towards bridging the divide between economic growth and environmental preservation through a framework which focuses on rights-based conservation, sustainable livelihoods, markets and incentives to achieve sustainable and resilient environmental policies.

The Education of the Electorate | Indian Liberals

In this Indian Liberals Musing, we recall an article published in 1961 where M.A. Venkata Rao discusses education for the electorate and the relationship between voters and representatives. He remarks that "the individual voter feels lost in the vast machinery and numbers involved, he does not feel that his individual vote counts for anything."
